Chamber plants oleanders

The Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce kicked off its beautification campaign last week by planting 20 oleanders on Via Contenta to mask views of the backs of buildings and some vacant lots. With Randy Randazzo, owner of Carmel Valley Market, contributing toward the purchase of the bushes and making an early morning trip to San Jose to pick them up, and Jim Miller of Canary Cottages contributing employee time, water service and some hose-hauling of his own, the bushes were planted Sunday, after a ceremonial groundbreaking Friday morning. Top left, Kit Kurz, representing Sierra Instruments, helps Randazzo unload the oleanders. Bottom left, Ralph Paton, who planted and will care for them, shows Bill Broder of Dulcie's Valley Take-Out and Linda Vance of Bank of America where the oleanders will be planted. Bottom right, Chamber president Lee Mink of Capital Planning Associates, from left, Victor Wuamett of Stone, Post and Flower, and Ginnie Drew, representing Strathmeyer Real Estate, break ground for the planting. All are members of the beautification committee. For more information, see 'Chamber Chatter' on page 2.

from our readers' point of view

Dear Editor:

Last Sunday's Chronicle carried a quotation from the Rev. Jesse Jackson, civil rights leader, and close friend of Martin Luther King:

"When I go in the schools, I see students with hats on, radios blasting, and writing on the walls. When I see those things, I know there's no moral authority in those schools. Without moral authority, there's no discipline, and where there's no discipline, there's no education."

Have you visited Carmel High School lately?

Dear Editor:

Proponents of the Coast Plan take the position that only developers, exploiters, fastbuck artists, or members of sinister special-interest groups oppose the Plan. Would they also say farmers are evil and selfish to oppose the Plan? Probably.

But let supporters of the radical Coast Plan consider the Monterey County Farm Bureau's recommendations with regard to the Plan. Briefly, the farmers recommend: Due recognition of the coast as a valuable resource; termination of the Coastal Act according to Proposition 20 provisions — i.e. end of 1976; land planning for all — not just the coastal segment; local government to carry out policies set up by the legislature — i.e. by elected rather than appointed officials; scrupulous respect for private ownership of land; public acquisition of land only when absolutely essential, with burden of proof on the State; full compensation to owners when property rights are jeopardized, as well as when land is taken; costs of all programs to be documented and made known to the public before any legislation is passed.

There are the reasonable, studied recommendations of an organization which rejects the Coast Plan — an organization whose members practice conservation while environmental elitists babble about it. These are the folks who till the land, raise the cattle, stock our larders, furnish us vast free open spaces, pay their share to buy parks, and help support the bureaucrats who prey upon us, including especially — the Coastal Commission.

Monterey County Farm Bureau

Land use talks set

The board of supervisors is interested in the public's ideas on growth and future county land use and has set June 1 at 2 p.m. in the Supervisors' Chambers, Courthouse, Salinas, to hear and receive information on factors pertaining to organized growth in Monterey County.

Members of the board would like to hear from any interested citizens as to opinions or thoughts that might be available on this subject and invites all interested persons to appear and share their views.

While the board will receive all oral testimony at that time, it would be helpful to also present ideas in writing so these can be carefully reviewed by the board and planning commission at the appropriate time in the future.

Closed doors — again!

They're at it again — holding closed door meetings over in Monterey to decide the fate of our area as far as water supply goes. This time they've also thrown in consideration of wastewater management and solid waste disposal during their tete a tetes.

Who are "they"? This time it's a broad spectrum of 21 people called together by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Agency coordinator, but carefully avoiding gathering a quorum of any one agency, thereby successfully side-stepping the Brown Act on open meetings.

MPWMA coordinator Frank Langham assured us Monday that the meeting last Friday was "just a study session," a chance for them to "brainstorm over lunch". Our readers know how wary we are of "study sessions" and "brainstorming" when the public doesn't get a chance to participate in the thunder and lightning and only hears the distant rumblings of yet another tax on the horizon.

What it boils down to is, these representatives were considering expanding the existing California American Water Company service area to wider boundaries and conceivably to include buying the water system, controlling the water supply and branching out to include treatment of wastewater. When we heard about the meeting, even the handling of garbage was being discussed. Is this what they formed a water management agency for?

In the first place, we're against closed door meetings of this sort. We've told the Peninsula's mayors, the nucleus of the joint powers agency, about this time and again. We're aware this meeting doesn't fall within the letter of the law of the Brown Act, but it certainly doesn't meet the intent of the law. (It was interesting to us Monday that Langham could discuss a "power segment" in the same breath as a "study session.")

Whenever such diversely powered officials as a supervisor, an environmental health director, city attorneys, sanitary district representatives and representatives of the commercial sector get together to discuss what conceivably can be done with our tax monies, we have a right to be present from the start, not just when we happen to find out about the meeting later.

Perhaps these people don't want their options narrowed quite so rapidly, quite so privately, although Langham assured us Monday there would be a public hearing after the group has made its decision. Later may be too late for the unsuspecting taxpayer to have any say in the matter.

It's time these "study sessions" stopped. We've been over this ground too many times. The public must demand the water management agency cease slipping through loopholes in the Brown Act and fully publicize their meetings so we can fully assess their intentions. The next "study session" is set for 4 p.m. on May 17 at the Monterey Library. We imagine a number of people will want to attend.

chamber chatter

By JEANELLE KAMINSKE

The Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce is reviving the good old small town spirit that has been an esprit de corps bonding together a motley group of Valley business people, ranchers, old-timers, new-timers and everybody who loves the Valley as a very special place and takes pride in living and working here.

Prime examples of this spirit can be found in the winners of the Chamber's annual Good Egg awards, people from all walks of life who have taken time out from busy lives to give talents toward making the Valley an even better place to live and work.

This year, the Chamber under the direction of Lee Mink has several goals to achieve. Here's Randy Randazzo, owner of the Carmel Valley Market, to tell you about one of them:

For many weeks, the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce Executive Board has been studying areas in the Valley that need sprucing up. The first of the Chamber's beautification program involved planting oleanders on Via Contenta from the intersection of Carmel Valley Road. This species of oleander was chosen for its ability to take our kind of climate — hot in the summer and very cool in winter.

For those who are familiar with oleanders, this one is a Mrs. Reeding. Its maximum height at maturity is six feet. It has double pink flowers and will bloom from early spring to early fall. Appropriately, it was selected by the Carmel Valley Beautification Committee.

In order to have representation from the whole Valley, there are members on the committee from the three major commercial areas. The prime responsibility of this committee is to determine what can be done to improve areas that are in definite need of help.

The committee has made several recommendations: A contest will be held for all merchants, businesses and property owners to participate in the improvement of landscaping and interior and exterior conditions.

Applications will be mailed to Chamber members and additional applications will be available at the Chamber office in the Oaks Building on Carmel Valley Road in the Village. There will be four categories: Landscaping; interior improvements, including window displays; structural improvements; vacant lot clean up.

To assist in the spruce up program and the disposal of unwanted cans, cardboard, small amounts of trimmings, weeds, etc., but not including old furniture or appliances or lots of excess trimmings, the Chamber will place dumpsters at four strategic locations at a date to be announced soon.

The contest begins when entry blanks are mailed and returned either to the Chamber office, the Bank of America in the Village or Strathmeyer Real Estate at Mid-Valley. Awards will be made at a barbecue the ending weekend of the contest.

The Chamber invites all local civic clubs to participate. Through a unified effort, this program will be a success. We invite all merchants and business people in the Valley to join the Chamber and be active in its endeavors. Working together as a team will help us help you.

Sanitary district considers ban

By DAVID COLE

The possibility of another moratorium — this one on sewer connections — was brought up Monday evening at the monthly meeting of the Carmel Sanitary District.

Speaking of the district's sanitary treatment facility, board member Ted Weller told the board: "It appears we are at our maximum capacity, or kicking around it, right now."

Board member Ken McGinnis, referring to the county planning commission, said: "They've flagrantly disregarded warnings in EIRs."

Why they came

'Qualitative change'

By LESLIE JOHNSON

Why does a rising young businessman, near the top of his field in real estate in Los Angeles, leave a solid position with a substantial national company to settle at the lower end of comparatively bucolic Carmel Valley?

Dan Robbins and his family did it for "a qualitative change" in their lifestyle, making the move on the proverbial spur of the moment two months ago and extremely satisfied with their decision.

The Robbins had been taking vacations to the Peninsula for several years. "We'd buy a bottle of wine, some sandwich makings for lunch and then just go sit on a rock. That was a vacation for us," Dan says.

Then a house caught their eye as they were on their way to a rock recently, it was "ideal," and the decision was made.

"It was only after we'd closed the deal on the house that my wife asked me what I planned to do to make a living," Dan says, but there are no regrets yet — and the Robbins anticipate few.

"Lots of people go through

Although the board generally agreed that there was a serious problem with overloading of the present sanitary district facilities, a decision on just what to do about it was put off until next month, when more facts will be available.

Meanwhile, the board has issued a letter to the Monterey County Planning Department concerning the Meharry project at the mouth of the valley. The letter, in part, warned that the district, "hereby puts the County of Monterey on notice that the Carmel Sanitary District cannot guarantee that this project will be annexed or served by the life regretting everything, all because of what I call the 'Ould've's'. They would've done this, they should've done that and they could've done a dozen other things, but they didn't, and so they're unhappy," he says.

Robbins illustrates his point, "The morning before we looked at the house, when we weren't even thinking about making the move, we were seated near an older couple at breakfast. He kept talking about a chance he had 20 years ago to buy land in Carmel Valley where now they might have had their Carmel Sanitary District until plant capacity is significantly increased..."

At the same time, district engineer David Kennedy was instructed to prepare a chart of projected flows and other pertinent data to be sent to the county at the earliest possible time.

Scheduled for next meeting are reports from the engineer and legal counsel on the need and procedure for limiting sewer connections.

The concern about the district plant's capacity is a fairly new one. Until recently, it was assumed that the facility — ultimately to be capable of handling 4 Million Gallons a Day (MGD) of raw sewage — was now able to take care of at least 3 MGD.

Then tourist traffic in January caused extremely high flows and odor problems, which occurred again around Easter. McGinnis and Weller, along with plant manager Max Drewien, issued a warning in February that the plant was perilously close to capacity.

At Monday night's meeting, engineer Kennedy explained that the plant actually has a capacity, overall, of 2.4 MGD — not the 3 MGD originally rated. According to Drewien's statistics, the plant puts through an average of 2.1 MGD at present, with some days rising to 2.3 and one day recording 2.7.

In a chart labeled, "Projected Flows by 1980," Kennedy lists 362,800 gallons per day that could be added to the district within the next four years. Many of the new contributors are considered "connection guaranteed" because they have already paid all or part of their annexation burden.

That projection, McGinnis pointed out, was based on dry weather flows and on no expansion of the district further up Carmel Valley.

"I'm afraid that by the time we get through this summer," Weller added, "Mission Fields will be up in arms — and I can't say I'd blame them."

Weller was referring to the residential neighborhood across the Carmel River from the district's plant. At the same Monday night meeting, two homeowners from Mission Fields voiced their dismay at what they called, "the recurring problem of an odor."

Part of the problem can be attributed to the Area of Special Biological Significance (ASBS) order for Carmel Bay. The district has been instructed to complete an area-wide sanitation plan by 1978 and the state is reluctant to okay new facilities until that overall plan is complete.

The district has been asking for funds for a new digester and a new clarifier which, if approved, would expand capacity slightly and alleviate problems of odor and sludge handling. Although the digester has finally been given the state's blessing, according to board chairman Don Kirk, the Environmental Protection Agency is now holding it up for possibly two more months.

Unfortunately, the digester will not actually increase capacity, although

CSD warned about dumping

The California Regional Water Quality Control Board in San Luis Obispo has officially issued a warning that the Carmel Sanitary District was in violation of effluent standards during the month of January.

In a May 6th letter to the district, the regional board said: "It was noted that in January, 1976, the discharge was in violation of the settleable solids, suspended solids, BOB and turbidity limits specified in the NPDES Permit issued by this board on April 19, 1974.

In other words, during January, the district was putting effluent into the bay which did not meet state standards. Those standards — in rough, general terms — require effluent to be 85 percent pure when it is issued into Carmel Bay.

The regional board demanded an explanation of the violation, and the reply made by plant manager Max Drewien serves as an explanation as to the nature of the district's current capacity problems.

Drewien told the regional board that the problem in January was not due to average flows, which are now around 2.1 Million Gallons per day (MGD), but to the massive peak flows caused by the seasonal influx of tourists.

Ordinarily the flow at 6 a.m. is about 1 MGD, according to Drewien. That flow increases steadily until it peaks at about 3 or 3.5 MGD at 9:30 a.m. But the peak flow — well over the plant's 2.4 MGD capacity — only lasts until 11 a.m. at which time it rapidly decreases to 2 MGD where it stays until 11:30 p.m.

But in January, Drewien says, the peak 3.4 MGD load lasted from 9:30 a.m. all the way until 4:30 p.m.

What resulted from these January peaks was relatively dirty effluent, and a massive amount of smelly sludge which had to be dried and hauled away.

But Drewien cautions that January's experience serves as a warning.

"In the first four months of 1974 we had an average flow of 1.7 MGD and 13.58 inches of rain, he says. "For the first four months of 1976 we had an average flow of 2.1 MGD and 6.35 inches of rain."

Since more rain means more infiltration of water into the sewer system, Drewien feels it is only common sense that the increase in flows from year to year will continue to increase and next winter, if it is a wet one, could be far worse.

Drewien feels the solution is a larger digester and sludge thickener, a secondary clarifier and a tank truck to haul off the digested sludge, thus reducing the load on the sludge drying beds.

That solution, however, may not be forthcoming until 1978 when the district's area-wide facilities plan has been completed. Without the comprehensive plan required by Carmel Bay's ASBS order, the state is reluctant to supply grants for expansion of the present facility.

Water consumption up 25%

By LESLIE JOHNSON

Water consumption on the Monterey Peninsula is up 25 percent over last year and pumping of wells in the Carmel Valley 75 percent over that of the driest year on record, according to Dick Sullivan, vice-president of California American Water Company.

Although the Los Padres and San Clemente reservoirs are at 92 percent capacity, Sullivan warned, "If there's not another rain soon, we could need to ration this year." He was addressing the monthly meeting of the Zone 11 water advisory committee.

Sullivan said the company was drawing on Valley supplies earlier this year than most in order to avoid pulling water from the reservoirs until later in the year. In a normal rain year, he said, wells in the Valley wouldn't be extensively tapped until June or July, because the dams would be spilling and water would be pulled from reservoirs.

He told Zone 11 refill of storage had been making a net daily gain, although that rate had been dropping. While they had been gaining about .15 feet per day, the 24 hour period prior to the meeting showed a gain of only .05 feet.

Water consumption for the first quarter of 1976 is 4,759, up almost 26 percent from 1975's first quarter consumption of 3,780.5, and up almost three percent from 1972's first quarter of 4,633.6, Sullivan said.

"The difference between 1972 (the driest year on record) and 1976 is that in 1972 the two dams were spilling in late June, but neither has spilled in this water year for several months," Sullivan said.

Because the company has delayed drawing from storage, they are extracting more from Carmel Valley wells, including the Begonia well, without benefit of desirable iron removal, Sullivan said.

Thus far, the company has produced 1,390.7 acre feet from its Carmel Valley sources, nearly 2.5 times production during the first quarter of 1975, and 73 percent higher than production during the same period of 1972.

Noting eight complaints from Carmel in the past week, Sullivan said the company anticipates increased red water complaints. "This year, about all we can tell them is they have a choice between that and no water at all," he said.

Urging voluntary water conservation, Sullivan warned water rationing was a very real possibility before the end of the year.

Monterey representative Leo McIntyre suggested Cal-Am make a correlation between rainfall, increased production and any increase in treated wastewater output in order to determine if water is "being run down the drain or spread over lawns," to provide the PUC with an indication of the rate of success of various conservation education programs.

Sullivan said Tuesday the increased production from Valley wells should not be considered "alarming," noting well production would level off during the year after the company begins to draw more from their reservoirs.

In other action, the committee heard a report from Frank Langham, coordinator for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management Agency, who had attended a meeting May 5 in San Francisco with the PUC in preparation for hearings in Seaside beginning May 24.

"First, I'm pessimistic about any possibility of the ban on new connections being lifted in May," Langham began.

"Second, I believe there are some considerations being made by the PUC that distress cases should be examined one by one, especially legal lots of record," he said.

"Third, their attitude seems to be one of improved cooperation in seeing our crises of economy and water supply," he said. "I think they are attempting more

Padre Parent Club

The final meeting of the Carmel High Padre Parents Club is scheduled for Monday, May 17 at 7:30 p.m. in the Library. The following slate of officers selected by the nominating committee will be presented for the approval of the membership; President, Pat and Glen Myers, Carmel; vice-president, Deolores and Deane Hendricks, Carmel Valley; secretary, Mrs. Bruce (Ardith) Ryan, Carmel Valley; treasurer, India and Don Harrison, Carmel Valley; membership, Mary Kay and Dick King, Carmel Valley; public relations, Jean and Cyrus Fitton, Carmel; scholarship, Jeannette and Lloyd Swanson, Carmel Valley.

Naeda Robinson, chairman of the recent Bargain Fair sponsored by the organization, has tabulated the final figures on the scholarship benefit and announces a total of $4,620 was made at the April event.

Hollywood visitor

Miss Edith McClurg, whose first Hollywood film has just been released, was a guest last week at the Sage Road home of her aunt, Mrs. Donna Hamilton.

Selected for a role in the movie, "Carrie" starring Piper Laurie, the versatile young actress was selected for a role which she described as "comic relief." The young performer has done a great deal of radio and television on the East Coast, but this is her first film opportunity.

Guide dog trip

Guide dog puppies, the 4-H project of Tricia Collins and Kim Neill traveled to San Mateo County Field Day last weekend. Puppies, Lloyd and Isaiah, and the girls were accompanied by project leader, Mrs. A.A. Collins.

Puppies were tested and evaluated during the day on such obstacles as a metal grate, a flight of stairs, entering and exiting a van, being checked by a veterinarian, and behaving properly in a restaurant. This was the last field day that these puppies will attend since they will be recalled to San Rafael at the end of June for the next phase of training in the guide dog program.

Spaghetti results

Flower winners

The 16th annual flower show sponsored by the Carmel Valley Garden Association turned the Tularcitos multipurpose room into a blooming expression of the show theme "A Fairyland of Flowers" when the 159 entries were placed in appropriate categories by 58 exhibitors. Visitors from all over northern California and from as far away as Victoria, B.C., joined local residents in viewing the two day show, highlighted by a clever theme decor of castle, pumpkin coach and white mice, created by Virginia Ford. Many reservations have been received, according to "Hodge Podge" chairman, Mrs. Ralph Morrow, for table space at the fourth semi-annual flea market to be held 9-4 on Saturday at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center on Ford Road.

The Center's tables have all been reserved, but reservations for space may still be made by those wishing to set up two card tables. Phone Mrs. Morrow 659-2112, Mrs. Richard McKenzie, 659-2965 or Mrs. Harvey Deal 659-2369.

Bargains galore — especially in children's clothing, baby furniture and toys — at the rummage sale planned for Saturday, 9-4 by the Carmel Mid-Valley Co-op Nursery School.

Mrs. Warren (Linda) Kaufman, chairman of the event, directs shoppers to Meadows Road (between Valley Hills Nursery and All Saints School) where there will be a wide selection of miscellaneous items, homebaked goods, plants, and popcorn!

Proceeds from the sale will benefit the purchase of new outdoor equipment for the school.

Saleable items are still welcomed and donations will be called for if you telephone a pick-up request to Mrs. Kaufman, 659-4889.

Coin show opens

Valley members of the Monterey Peninsula Coin Club are busy polishing their collections for entry in the Annual Coin Show scheduled for Sunday, May 16 from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. at the Carmel Middle School. Admission is free and all numismatists are welcome.

In addition to coin exhibits by well known collectors, experts will be in attendance to give information and appraisals. There will be coins for sale or trade by responsible dealers selected from many parts of California.

Guests will have an opportunity to win prizes of silver and gold coins and food will be available for the hungry viewers.

Church BBQ Sunday

Putting last minute touches on the old fashioned family fun day and barbecue scheduled for Sunday at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club grounds are chairman Dean Diaz and committee members from the Parish of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church. Tickets available at the barbecue may be pre-ordered from Diaz, Lou Allaire or Joan Hentges who will be assisting along with Jack Wade, Luther Washington and Don Weber.

Steak dinners are $4 per adult and hot dog menus for the children are $1 each.

Marie Seliskar, door prize chairman, has an exciting variety of donated door prizes which will be presented during the afternoon including donations from Guiseppe's Work Bench, CV Chevron Station, Marzi's Pottery, Plaza Linda Restaurant, Village Liquors, Will's Fargo, Baskin-Robbins, Martin's Market, Graciella's Casa d'Italia, and Homestead Pottery.

Region 10 Queen

Region 10 of the California State Horsemen's Association crowned their queen on Saturday at the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club. A potluck dinner and dancing was enjoyed by families and friends following the coronation.

A panel of five judges judged each contestant on poise, beauty, personality, appearance, written examination, riding and speaking ability for the total of 100 points.

Jo Ellen Atkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Atkins of Salinas was selected queen from among five contestants. With her court, she will be riding in the different parades and horse shows in the area, as well as going to Santa Rosa for the annual CSHA Horse Show where she will compete in the state queen contest.

Members of the court include Laura Sherman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Sherman of Carmel Valley, first runner-up, and Ellen Deitsch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arelen Deitsch of Salinas.

The girls were presented "coolers" for their horses, scrapbooks, and other gifts. Sandra Henderson of Salinas was chairman of the contest.

Blood Bank totals

Proud, as usual, of the Valley residents who contributed to make Thursday's visit from the American Red Cross Bloodmobile a successful community effort is chairman Mrs. Thomas McKiernon, who reports a total of 101 donors.

Marjorie would like to express grateful thanks to the ladies who manned the reservation tables in the Village which attracted a great many donor pledges. They include Mmes. Chap Richmond, Calvin Garner, Walter Mause, Melvin Rich, Leslie Biggins, Adolf Freidenthal, Clifford Bolgard, Tom Dixon, W.S. Francis, William Baugh, Shirley McKiernon, Dorothy Mecklenberg, T.B. McKiernon, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Slatterback.

Thanks also to the canteen works, Mr. Henry Wilson and Mrs. Melvin Rich, to the Cadette Girl Scout Troop No. 2161 who put up and took down the Red Cross Bloodmobile posters; and to Robert Grant, Peter and Chris Kelly who assisted with the set-up and clean-up of the Blood Bank.

Santa Catalina plans concert featuring locals

On Tuesday Evening, May 18, at 8 p.m. Katie Clare Mazzeo and Rosario Mazzeo will join Maria Gibson to present a selection of concert pieces in the new Performing Arts Center at Santa Catalina School.

The program will include Alan Hovhaness' Saturn, Robert Schumann's Frauenlieben und Leben, Hugo Kauder's Sonata, and selections from the Pierre Gaveaux Opera, Le Trompeur Trompe.

Katie Clare Mazzeo has studied with Arthur Schinable, Nadia Boulanger and other pianists, and has given solo and chamber music concerts in the United States and Canada. A former member of the faculty at New England Conservatory and of Longy School of Music, Miss Mazzeo appears frequently as guest artist with the Crown Chamber players of University of California at Santa Cruz, and is currently on the faculty of both Santa Catalina School and York School.

Rosario Mazzeo, for 33 years clarinetist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is currently director of the Crown Chamber Players at Crown College, and was a member of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood from its inception until 1966. Many composers, including Hindemith, Piston, and Harris have written music especially for him.

Miss Gibson was for several years the soprano soloist with the Carmel Bach Festival, and is now the featured soprano with the Bach to Mozart Ensemble, a virtuoso group comprised of outstanding symphony players from the Bay Area. She is also director of the program in vocal studies at Stanford University. She has sung under the direction of such noted conductors as Alfred Wallenstein, Paul Kletzki, Georg Solti, Pierre Boulez, Robert Shaw and Rober Wagner. On a sabatical study trip to England and the continent last year she coached Lieder in London with Paul Hamburger and French Art Song with Pierre Bernac in Paris.

The concert is open to the public and there is no admission charge.

Sal Mercurio will be back on the Peninsula entertainment scene as of May 25 when he takes over the Casa Munras stage from Joe and Mary Ingram who are leaving the Casa in a move by Nick Lombardo to make the music a bit more contemporary.

Attempts by this writer to interview the Ingrams and Lombardo have been unsuccessful. Mercurio, understandably, would rather not comment on the Ingram exit. But usually reliable sources tell me that Lombardo had been unhappy with the failure of the Ingrams to attract a younger crowd and had opted for Mercurio.

Sal, who headlined the group Wave at the Del Monte Hyatt House for quite a while, calls his new unit Nice 'N' Easy. The talented accordionist will be backed by drummer Tony Nuovo and guitarist George Sanchez. Sanchez has a classical as well as pop music background and has played in many states in the east including New York and Texas. Nuovo is a Peninsula resident who works in the dry cleaning business and has played with the Contempos for area private parties.

Mercurio describes the Nice 'N' Easy sound as "sedate and laid-back. Our tunes will have some power so that the folks can have a good time dancing to them but we won't be as loud as the Boiler Room. We hope to give the dancers in town something unique."

Nice 'N' Easy will be playing Tuesday through Saturday from 9-1:30.

Vicki and Paul, the talented pop-oriented duo currently headlining the Holiday Inn Monterey stage, will start recording original material at Super Sound Studios in Monterey this week.

"We'll be flying some friends up from San Diego to help us on the sessions," explained Paul. "Vicki does the majority of the writing and I've been concentrating on the arranging." Although they hope to apply various approaches to their sound, they definitely will record a reggae piece which they have had a lot of positive feedback to while playing at the Holiday.

Vicki and Paul will be playing in the Capt's Cove Lounge through the end of May and offer a welcome and quiet approach to dance music. Stick around for one of the later sets on the weekend and you'll catch their oldies routine which includes Paul's humorous Elvis Presley imitation.

Carmel resident Patti Burriss is presently at the Canton Trade Fair in mainland China looking for objects to bring back to the Golden Door East in the Carmel Plaza.

Admission to the Canton fair is by invitation only and Mrs. Burriss is one of less than two hundred invitees from the United States. She'll be searching for the out of the ordinary handmade items that have made the Golden Doors East a successful shop.

Joe Regelski

Patti is hoping to find some old rosewood furniture as well as jade and cloisonne items.

Nancy Snow, former newscaster for KRML, has been appointed the Monterey County Coordinator for the Roger Poyner for Senate campaign... Bob Blaisedell writes that his work on the Robert Frost film reported a few weeks ago in this column is doing well. He teamed up with Pacific Grove historian Randy Reinstedt in Washington, D.C. and they drove to New York together. There they split with Bob going back to his film work for the Frost Foundation and Randy taking in the Smithsonian which he writes "is unreal" and continuing on his train trip across the country.

It's official — one of the premiere rock groups on the Peninsula is calling it quits. Cannery Roll will say goodbye to their friends in special midnight performances at the Dream Theatre this Friday and Saturday.

When I last caught Roll at the Hatchcover late last summer, they were already going about in separate directions. Leader Jay Tolasson and singer Cindy Darnell were helping the Dream Theatre open its doors taking part in the live performance before the opening film and bassist Foye Walkup (now teamed with Julie Domac) had just started with the group. Guitarist Ray Wheeler and keyboard artist Richard Neiss were holding down the fort.

But that has been the mark of Cannery Roll. It always has been the rock group from which some of the top talent in Monterey could be found and fine musicians were always around to fill in any vacancies that came about.

Dream Theatre owner John Harris suggests that a lot of local music folk will be sitting in with the current edition of Roll this weekend. It may be worth your while to stop by at least one of the evenings.

FLAUTISTS of the 7th Infantry Division Band are preparing for their June 6 concert at Soldier Field, Presidio of Monterey. The third in a series of six Sunday afternoon concerts will begin at 4 p.m. The band people are (from left) Specialist Five Tommy Smithers, Specialist Five Janet Myers, Specialist Four Gwyneth Pfeuger and Private First Class Frank Hanejko.

GEMINI is back

The piece by Spain's Alejandro Casona, was first performed in Buenos Aires in 1944. Casona combines the essentially human with ultimate mortal destiny in a dramatization of the mystery of Death (personified by The Pilgrim) who embraces and soothes human anguish, leaving us conserved and wrapped in poetic illusion.

La Dama de alba will be performed by students from Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies Spanish and Spanish translation and interpretation departments. Admission will be free and the public is invited.

Planners split 4-4 on ranch

By LESLIE JOHNSON

In a volatile session Wednesday afternoon, the Monterey County planning commission sent the Carmel Valley Ranch specific plan to the board of supervisors with no recommendation after successive votes failed to receive a majority in favor or against the plan.

With chairman Ed Whitaker disqualifying himself on the basis of possible conflict of interest, the commission found itself split four-four on motions to approve or deny the plan.

Voting against recommending the plan were commissioners Leon Stutzman, Eleanor Taylor, Marit Evans and Charmaine Cruchett. In favor of recommending the plan were commissioners Dr. Ed Marcucci, J. Jimenez, Peter Cailotto and Darrell Bengard.

Disagreement began early in the public hearing when vice-chairman Evans asked Welcome Randal from the county health department to read a communication received that afternoon from the state department of health.

Myron Etienne, attorney for the proponents, objected to the reading on several grounds: The hearing had been closed to comment from the floor, precluding response from developers; representatives from the department had already made appearances before the commission; and, the letter was "full of inaccuracies."

In the letter, H. R. Witt, senior sanitary engineer in the water sanitation section of the state department of health, recommended the commission deny the project for several reasons.

Witt's letter said the developer had "not given us assurance that there is an adequate quantity of water available (from deep wells), nor is there sufficient data to demonstrate" the water quality is acceptable.

Further, he said, the proposed sewage treatment plant and spray irrigation system would "deteriorate the quality of the underground water table to the degree where it will no longer be usable for domestic purposes."

When he was later questioned by the commission as to the sufficiencies of two conditions to solve the problems he noted, Witt called the first "perfectly acceptable to the state department of health," and said he was "in full agreement" with another.

But the fireworks occurred before then at the commission level, when Cailotto vigorously questioned the propriety of the letter received about an hour before the hearing began.

"The letter appears quite damaging as far as approval of this project is concerned.

What I want to know is why are we getting it at this late date? This could kill the project," Cailotto said, noting that state health department representatives had appeared at previous hearings and not objected to the proposed systems before.

Mrs. Evans responded that the letter was sent in connection with a request she had made of the department. "I am extremely concerned about my oath of office, especially in regards to the health of the public," she began.

She related a story of a round table discussion she had participated in four years ago with experts in the field of sanitation who warned her to keep her car windows rolled up if she drove within a mile of areas where treated wastewater was used for irrigation because of the risk of viral infection.

Mrs. Evans also discussed a meeting she attended in Washington, D.C., two years ago when the Environmental Protection Agency revealed it had discovered live polio viruses four miles out to sea in a line of sewage flow.

As far as the timing of the response was concerned, she indicated that "perhaps the department had not had enough time to study all the conditions."

Project director Kaye Chandler later refuted that statement, saying his records show the first draft of conditions were sent to the state health department, including to Witt, on Feb. 12.

He further indicated the company had answered a request for additional information from the department on Feb. 20.

After Mrs. Evans' discourse, Cailotto resumed his tack on the lateness of the response. "We had state representatives here before and they didn't bring up anything of this nature," he said.

"We asked them specific questions and they specifically said there would be no problems under certain conditions," Cailotto continued.

"A letter of this nature is contradictory to what the representatives at the public hearing said. Somewhere along the line, we're being taken," he concluded.

Dr. Marcucci agreed with him "This is highly irregular. Besides, the conditions are so strict that these problems can be handled. If the developers can't comply with the conditions, that's the end of it."

Jimenez concurred, "We knew this was a long-term development. If they run into a technical problem, we'll have to solve it as they go along. I believe the agencies responsible for all these conditions will have to reconsider it as it goes along."

Stutzman agreed the letter

Alt prints at hospital

Rare bromoil prints of the internationally exhibited photographs of the late Rudolph Alt of Carmel Valley are now being shown in the north gallery off the fountain court at Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

Alt and Dr. Emil Mayer, developer of the bromoil transfer process, were fellow members in the Vienna Photographers Club, one of the oldest photographic societies in Europe.

Alt's work as well as that of photographer Edward

Weston of Carmel were among the photographs selected by the Pictorial Photographers of America for the Sixth International Salon of Photography and Centennial Exhibit at the American Museum of Natural History in New York City in coordination with the 1939 World's Fair.

Two of Alt's photographs shown in that international exhibit are on display at the hospital. They are titled "Venetian Backyard" and "Lilac."

Alt, a graduate of the University of Vienna, was a banker and member of the Vienna Stock Exchange before he fled to Austria in 1938 after Nazi Germany occupied his country. His property was confiscated and he came to the United States as an immigrant, living for a time in New York and then Chicago. He was active in the foreign wool market and later served in an administrative capacity with the Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago before retiring to the Monterey Peninsula in 1963.

readily than in the past to see our local position."

Langham said he thought PUC staff members were favorably impressed with the efforts of the joint powers agency toward water conservation and education programs and the examination of long-term solutions to the water supply problem.

Several study sessions have been arranged by subcommittees of the agency to prepare for the hearings, Langham said, noting that individual formal complaints about the ban would not be heard by Parke Boneysteele, the hearing officer.

Langham outlined various points agency members would cover in presentations, saying he believed the most important point for the agency to communicate is that lifting the ban on legal lots of record would have an insignificant effect on service for existing customers.

Langham also mentioned an "informal study session" held last Friday and attended by over 20 elected and appointed officials to consider the possibility of an expanded water district serving both supply and treatment needs of an enlarged service area.

Although he said he anticipated the issue would not make the November ballot, or perhaps even the ballot in March, Langham said there would be another similar session on May 17.

Zone 11 committee members authorized their chairman Manuel DeMaria to represent them at future meetings.

Fire danger extreme

Residents of Monterey county are urged to think about how they might make their home and wildland areas fire safe for the coming fire season by state forest ranger Richard J. Ernest.

Ernest said that on a statewide basis, this year's drought compares to that of 1923-24. He noted that the 1924 fire season was one of the worst years on record in terms of acres of vegetation burned.

To date, there have already been three brush fires in the San Benito-Monterey area. Brush and timber are drying out approximately a month early this year as compared to those years with normal rainfall. This will make this year's fire season particularly bad, according to Ernest. Unless there is some good cool weather this summer, there is more danger of major brush fires in the wildland areas than usual.

Although the forestry Department will clear brush as part of a program of fire prevention in the wildlands, hikers and campers are urged to be extremely careful with smokes and campfires.

'No comment' on ranch was untimely, but indicated he felt it did not create any new problems for the commission.

"I'm sorry this has come up this way, for it may cloud the basic issues," he began. "The basic facts were presented adequately on sewage and some of this was discussed and alluded to, for example through the testimony by Dr. Betty Davis."

"This is not a new item" he maintained, "So I would think the commission can lay it aside and not enter it into the deliberations and still have the facts before them."

Mrs. Cruchett concurred, "I believe Mr. Stutzman is correct. This doesn't change anything. It still leaves us at the introduction to the committee report when it says 'All the problems have been solved, except transportation, water and sewage'."

There was little discussion on the plan itself after county counsel reminded the commission that it couldn't table a letter already read, saying it remained a piece of evidence for each commissioner to consider on its merits and in light of all other evidence.

Tempers flared again when Mrs. Evans asked Witt from the department of health to respond to questions about the letter.

Etienne competed with catcalls from the audience and the sound of a banging gavel when he attempted to raise a point of order prior to Witt's testimony. Mrs. Evans was as insistent as Etienne when she told him his point of order would be considered after Witt spoke.

(The point Etienne wished to make involved the time span the health department was dealing with in considering the conditions.)

After a brief comment by Dr. Marcucci in favor of the project, Stutzman addressed his fellow commissioners about a change of heart he had about the project.

"Until the last hearing on the plan, I had thought this was the most thoroughly thought-out plan I had seen in my years of experience on the planning commission," he began.

"But in the last two weeks, I have given a great deal of thought to the subcommittee report, and particularly Eleanor Taylor's minority report," he continued.

"I will cast my vote not against the project because of any defects in the plan, but as a matter of timing. Prematurity is a consideration in this matter," he concluded. "Perhaps there should be a third vote, aye, nay, and some time."

Before a roll call vote, Al Eisner, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association but speaking as an individual in this instance, rose to another point of order to question the eligibility of Dr. Marcucci to vote in the decision.

"I believe, and it is the belief of many people in Monterey County, that Dr. Marcucci should not vote in this matter because a successor has been named to his chair," Eisner said.

He warned against the complicated situation, noting a recent incident in Placer County when a city body had both the old and new appointees seated.

County counsel repeated the opinion rendered last week when Dr. Marcucci's eligibility to vote on the lower Carmel Valley master plan amendment was questioned.

(Counsel's opinion is that an appointee serves until his successor becomes eligible. Because Dr. Marcucci's successor was appointed on May 4 and, under the Moscone Act, had to file a statement of economic interest 10 days before he becomes eligible to vote, Dr. Marcucci was entitled to cast a vote on the matter before the commission.)

Dr. Marcucci moved and Bengard seconded that the commission recommend approval of the plan to the board of supervisors. When that vote tied, Stutzman moved and Cruchett seconded that the plan be denied on the basis of prematurity.

The vote tied a second time, and county counsel ruled the plan goes to the board with no recommendation from the commission. Five affirmative votes are required to approve a specific plan.

it will help with the odor problem, and the clarifier looks to be a long way in the future.

Weller thought the board would be kidding itself if it thought they'd get the clarifier before the area-wide facilities plan was completed, so he sees no relief for about three years.

Among their other actions Monday, the board instructed that a strong letter be sent to the state, urging the digester be approved.

Meanwhile, the board has begun procedures to hire a consultant to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement, rather than just a report, on the area-wide facilities plan. The need for an EIS was implied in a letter from the EPA and an EIS could cost the district between $75,000 and $200,000, as opposed to the $50,000 required by an EIR.

In other actions Monday, the district voted to hire two consultants to help develop the financial information for a modification of the district's agreement with Pebble Beach Sanitary District.

Shelburn Robinson, the board's attorney for 40 years

(the length of time he has held a license to practice law) announced his resignation of the post effective June 30.

Except for a short time during World War II, Robinson has served the district continuously, almost since its conception. During Robison's tenure, the district has never lost a lawsuit.

Kirk and board member Jim Pruitt will investigate the attorney situation and report back to the board next month, at which time a new board attorney will be voted on.

More Robbins move

who get ahead. It can be shown statistically that people who make a major move in their careers, a physical move, are the ones who come out on top in the long run."

Like many transplanted Easterners and hothouse southern Californians, Robbins didn't care for the urban ills which accompanied life in Los Angeles — the smog, the traffic, the rising crime rate and decreasing quality of education.

He echoes the feelings of many who came before him and who will more than likely follow him, "It's no place to raise a family." Carmel Valley and its environs are, he believes.

Robbins realizes life can't be a country idyll, however and believes his experience in real estate, development and investment will provide a good basis for making a living locally.

"People have to realize that not all 'developers' are the bad guys," Robbins says. "You have to have people willing to make the investment of their talents and money to build the homes the rest of us live in and the shopping and commercial centers we need."

"The tacky developer who goes in without the experience he needs or who runs out of money before a project can be completed is the developer who gives the rest of us a bad name," Robbins says.

He is in the process of creating a partnership with a Salinas man to begin investigating management and investment possibilities in the area.

"The key for any developer to remember is not to build figuring people will drive an extra 20 miles to live in your project. You have to build to accommodate growth, not to create a false need," Robbins says.

"If there's not a necessity for what you propose, you shouldn't be proposing it," he continues. For example, he says, the Northridge Center at Salinas was a highly controversial project that many said was unnecessary. However, few, if any of the store spaces are currently available.

Robbins says developers must have a sensitivity to the area they expect to serve, or they run the risk of destroying the most attractive features which make development an economic possibility.

Although he has no specific plans in the works at the moment, Robbins says, "It's easier to get to know the climate of work you're dealing with here. When I made the move to Los Angeles, it took me eight months of hard work, hand-shaking and telephone calls just to get to know the people I needed to be acquainted with. I've only been here two months, and I feel like I've almost always been here."

While not many have the nerve to make a move on such short mental preparation, Robbins says, the area attracts the kind of people he enjoys.

"A new found friend of mine was talking to me about how many people come here without jobs and take anything they can. This place is so wonderful, people are willing to do just about anything to pay the bills to get to stay," Robbins says.

Always the pragmatist beneath his dreams of a rosy future locally, however, Robbins and his family didn't "burn any bridges" in Los Angeles either. With two homes there leased to friends, he was ready to "give it a year."

Faculty members from Hartnell and Monterey Peninsula College will read from their own poetry and that of other poets on Friday evening May 14 in Room 1 of the Humanities Building on the MPC campus.

The readings are part of the Spring Poetry Series, sponsored by both colleges and are free to the public. The program starts at 8 p.m.

MPC participants include Dr. Idelle Sullens and William G. Minor of the English Department and Dr. Narayana Moorthy of the Philosophy Department. Dr. Phyllis Burke will be among the Hartnell College poets.

Dr. Moorthy was born and educated in India and obtained his master's and doctoral degrees at the University of California at Berkeley where he also was a Regents' Fellow in philosophy. He was an assistant compiler for the philosophical and religious volume of an encyclopedia in the Telugu language which is spoken in the state of Andhara Pradesh, India. He will read from the "Sudha," a poem in that language written by Gudipati Venkatachalam (Chalam), author and mystic. Elliot Robert, chairman of the MPC Humanities Division and also a published poet, will read the English translation.

Talcott vote tabulated

Congressman Burt Talcott voted "correctly" more often than not on the important issues during the first session of the 94th Congress, according to the National Chamber of Commerce.

Talcott, a Republican, made the "right" vote, according to the Chamber, on 11 of 17 votes they selected as "important to improving the quality of life for the American people."

Talcott's record was about normal for California Republicans, but the Democrats on the state delegation had no one voting with the Chamber more than five times.

Sens. Alan Cranston and John Tunney voted with the Chamber two and three times respectively on the 16 Senate votes the group selected.

The Chamber based their ratings on issues ranging from common site picketing to surface mining.
